Dear Josh,

I am writing on behalf of Dr. Albert Rothenberg, an old friend and colleague who is interested in the psychology of creativity and would very much like to talk with you. Al is turning now from consideration of creativity in literature to that in science. He is more interested in the creative process than in the biography of the creative person.

Al is completely trustworthy. If you have the interest and time, I'm sure that you will find it pleasant to talk to him and that your ideas will be enormously helpful to him. Al will write to you.

With best regards,

Chas. Radding
